Fest could go under; needs $$

The Berkeley Shakespeare Festival may shut its doors in six weeks unless the financially-troubled company raises $50,000 to make up an unexpected drop in contributions and grants.

The nine-year-old company fails to raise the funds, it would be the first major Bay Area theater group to succumb to funding cuts to the arts.

"The situation is precarious," said Bunnin, an attorney and president of the board of directors, who met last week with reporters at a press conference.

"The Festival must raise $50,000 in the next six weeks or shut its doors."

"Unless significant contributions come in right away, we face the very prospect of giving notice to approximately 75 company members and cancelling the remainder of the season.

"The main reason we are in this fix," said Bunnin, "is that contributions and grants have fallen far short of our reasonable expectations. These are hard times for the arts."

The Festival had expected — based on experience and the advice of a reputable arts development consultant — to receive approximately $400,000 in grants and other contributions. To date, it has received only $[illegible]. The company's operating budget is $400,000.

The Festival had expected a $15,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, and was recently notified that the amount had been cut to $1,500.

This year, the company also received $[illegible]00 from each member of a number Berkeley business community. This year, those donations were drastically reduced, Festival officials said.

"Even some major grant requests still outstanding, it may be too late, Bunnin said.

The Festival also just learned that the building it occupies at University Avenue and Milvia Street is to be demolished in a month, which means a new home — the fourth in several years — must be found for production and administrative facilities.

Box office receipts have lived up to expectations, according to Brunin.

Is it too hot for football?

By KEITH EASTHOUSE

For the local high school football players who started practice this past week, the Bay Area's summer fog is certainly a blessing. It is possibly a life-saver as well.

While most of their counterparts across the country grunt and groan through sizzling August heat, Bay Area preps usually have cool ocean breezes to refresh them when they take off their helmets. But if the fog stays away for a few days, as it often does this time of year, they are as vulnerable as anyone in Arkansas to a real killer — the sun.

According to a recently released study from Pennsylvania's Temple University, "53 high school and college football players died during the last 15 years because the hot, humid August weather did not allow their bodies to dissipate the heat generated during practice sessions."

They died from heat stroke, which Temple University researchers Tina Wailgum and Dr. Al Paolone said was preventable.

Wailgum and Paolone said in the study that the danger of heat stroke can be all but eliminated if coaches adopt such precautionary measures as keeping plenty of water available and allowing players to take rests when they need to.

Additionally, it was recommended that coaches who model pre-season practice after Marine boot camp modify their tactics during the first few days to give the body a chance to "acclimatize." The researchers said the fatalities almost always occur during the beginning of camp.

New El Cerrito football coach Frank Milo has guided Bay Area high school teams for the last 19 years and has never had an athlete get heat stroke. Nevertheless, when it does heat up, he takes precautions.

"During hot weather, we'll take water breaks in the middle of practice," said Milo, who occasionally supplies Gatorade for the entire team when real summer weather sets in. "And we always have salt tablets on hand.

"I have had some kids get cramps and become weak and nauseous from the heat. When this happens you've got to let them rest and drink water because they need to replenish the fluid they have lost from excess sweating."

Coaches haven't always been this kind. Milo said that when he played football in the mid-fifties, "it was un-

Pac-Man the Consumer

By LINDA McFADDEN

Long after this year's headline news of wars, political intrigues, and the disastrous economy have faded from memory, this will be remembered as the Year of Pac-Man.

This little electronic character, who looks like a pie with a slice missing, has become a national pasttime, a media hero, and an industry. He is everywhere — on T-shirts, bumper stickers, toys, headgear. Few places of business seem exempt from Pac-Mania. In restaurants, pizza parlors, supermarkets, laundromats, variety stores and bus stations throughout the land, the cry is heard — "Mom, daddy, can I have a quarter to play Pac-Man?"

As the parent of an avid video game player, I've succumbed to my own curiousity about this phenomenon to the extent of investing a few quarters myself.

To play the game, it is usually necessary to overcome any aversion you may have to wading through a bunch of kids to wait your turn at the game. You drop a quarter in the slot, grab the joystick, and manuever this little blip around a maze, gobbling up dots as he goes. The more dots our hero can gobble in a short time, the better, but there is a catch: Pac-Man must also avoid three critters resembling

Gimme shelter: annual housing crunch is on

Scanning the Co-op bulletin board in a search for a home

By STEPHEN EVANS

Vegetarian, non-smoking women who own no pets, have no children, and don't mind living with several housemates might find it easy to locate housing in the area this month.

Those who don't fit the above description might consider looking for a place to live in the outlying areas, or wait until November or December before shifting domiciles — if they are lucky enough already to have a place to stay.

August and September are traditionally the worst months of the year to be looking for rentals in this area,according to experts and anyone who has tried it, and this year is no different.

"Berkeley and San Francisco are neck-and-neck for the honor of being the most difficult city in the Bay Area for finding housing," says Larry Klein, vice-president of Home Finders, a rental agency with several Bay Area offices. "And, in Berkeley, this is always the worst time of the year."

According to Klein, Berkeley's rental vacancy rates average about one percent, and go lower at the end of the summer.

And housing in Berkeley has been in dwindling supply for at least a decade, despite a drop in population.

Census figures show the city's population decreasing from about 120,000 in 1970 to about 103,000 in 1980. The tightening housing supply is attributed mainly to a 70-percent increase in the number of single-person households over the same period.

Klein says Home Finders' rental list, for which housing seekers pay $39 for two months, includes an average daily inventory of 50 Berkeley vacancies in August, one-third the number they have in mid-winter. And while the number of listings is at its lowest, the number of people buying the list is at its highest.

Klein would not reveal exact figures "for competitive reasons," but he says business is up by six or seven percent over last year.

Eric Koessel, 28, a Home Finders' client, says things are even worse than Klein is saying. Koessel found only 11 Berkeley listings on one Tuesday's Home Finders list, most of them in what he called "undesirable neighborhoods."

"Usually they only have two or three Berkeley listings, though," says the lifelong Berkeley resident, who has been sleeping in his car or at friends' houses for the past month.

Koessel is among a mob copying listings from the bulletin board at the Co-op supermarket on Shattuck Avenue and Cedar Street. An erratically employed housepainter with "no credit rating," Koessel is pessimistic about finding an affordable place soon.

"I smoke, I'm a man, and I'm not vegetarian, and just look at the listings," he says, indicating the board. Most of the listings are for houses or apartments to share, ask for females, and often has a complex set of other demands — the renter should have "a high level of social consciousness," be "into communal living," or be a student at UC Berkeley.

It is the students pouring back into town at the end of summer to find a place to live during the upcoming school year that accounts for the annual housing crunch.

This year UC-Berkeley alone will enroll a projected 30,100 students. That is about 300 fewer students than last year, but in a city with only 46,334 housing units, according to the 1980 U.S. Census, the difference will hardly be

The university has beds for about 3,400 students, including the 185 new slots opening this year at the former site of the School for the Deaf and Blind at Dwight Way and Derby Street — purchased this spring for new dorm space.

The trend in recent years has been for students living off-campus to share a house or flat, and it is in shared housing that most openings arise, according to the university's Off-Campus Housing Coordinator Susan Bateman.

Last month, for instance, the Housing Office listed 444 places to share, as compared to only 118 studio apartments. Besides availability, shared housing has the advantage of being relatively inexpensive — Bateman estimates that typical shared rentals amount to between $180 to $250 a month, while a studio apartment starts at about $250 and often costs much more.

Bateman says the office has more listings than it did at the same time last year, mainly because of a "conscious listing recruitment drive" carried out earlier this summer. About 800 students a day leaf through some 850 listings, many of which are more than a week old and already taken, and experienced housing hunters say the search is no easier than in past years.

James Harrigan, 21, is a senior in economics, just returned from a year of study in Europe.

"It's almost certainly harder to find a place now than when I was looking two years ago," he says. "It's bad, real bad. Anyone who looks for housing in Berkeley in August is either chronically stupid or found it impossible to get here before now."

Harrigan fits himself in the latter category. He has been looking for a one-bedroom apartment "somewhere within striking distance of campus" for about a week, has checked the housing office and the bulletin boards at the Co-op supermarkets, and is considering Home Finders in hopes of improving his luck.

"In one whole day of calling places I only turned up one interview, and when I got there they had rented the place," he says. "The only other places I've seen have been on the ground floor in dicey neighborhoods."

It is certainly a buyer's market for anyone with shelter to lease. One household on Berryman Street listed a tiny room for rent at $140 a month, and was "flooded with calls."

"We must have had 50 calls on the first day," says Janet Diehl, one of the current tenants.

The man who finally got the room had an elaborate "renter's resume," which included complete credit references, the names and addresses of his previous three landlords, and a personal description.

Pac Man: Everyman & consumer

dust mops with eyes which pursue him around the maze as he gobbles away. One run-in with them and he's a goner. If they change color, though, Pac-Man can nab them.

This entire drama unfolds so rapidly it may take the uninitiated adult several quarters' worth of play with expert coaching from a child to catch on.

There is another version of the fame called "Ms. Pac-Man." Here the gobbler sports a hair bow and lipstick. if she succeeds in the game, a cute little cartoon courtship with Pac-Man unfolds, sort of a video "Dating Game." Presumably these modifications are intended to appeal to girls.

We parents aren't quite sure how we feel about video games in general. On one hand, they seem a harmless diversion. And sometimes a handful of quarters seems a small price to pay for getting the kids out of our hair while we get on with our business. But the intensity of the kids' involvement in this pasttime gives us pause. What is all this doing to them? Will it affect their schoolwork? their eyesight? their personalities?

Like all games, video games are not only recreation, they teach. And since none of us adults can yet boast that we spent afternoons and weekends playing video games in our youth and we turned out all right, we have some uneasiness about just what video games may be teaching our children. Many of us who have steered our children through early childhood avoiding toy soldiers and cap pistols are dismayed to see our offspring playing militaristic video games in which the players try their skill at blasting alien invaders out of the galaxy.

Compared to the sophisticated military tactics of some video games, Pac-Man seems benignly non-violent. All he does is eat dots, right?

Our icons always reflect some facet of our human nature. Public response to Pac-Man suggests that this little character connects with something deep within us: Pac-Man is Everyman. He is the person our culture urges each of us to be: the Ultimate Consumer. Our quarter in the slot engages us in a little morality play: the good is to scarf up all you can while evading annihilation by the baddies.

This Pac-Man who has captivated our imaginations — and millions of our quarters — is a little reflection of ourselves as the marketplace sees us. From birth we are awash in a sea of media-borne messages which tell us who we are, what our purpose in life is, and what is Good. You are born to consume, the media tell us. Your purpose is to consume as much as possible and avoid catastrophe.

Most of us realize, with a vague sense of unease, that we own and use far more than we need. Surrounded by a tantalizing array of creature comforts and lifestyle options, it is difficult for us not to consume far past the limits imposed by our needs and our pocketbooks.

Our Western religious tradition teaches that we human beings are made in the image of our Creator. What we already are is special. Nothing that we can take into ourselves makes us anything more. Asked a question aout dietary practices, Jesus replied that what comes out of a person in the form of words and actions is far more important that what goes in. Consuming is far from the ultimate good our popular culture suggests that it is.

In some future century archaeologists digging through the remains of our civilization may puzzle over the image of a grinning circle they will find inscribed on many objects. Perhaps they will conclude that our friend Pac-Man was the focus of a popular cult in the late 20th century. They just may be right.

Football practice is hot work for these El Cerrito High players heard of to take a drink during practice.

Football: when the heat's

"I can remember a lot of us were feeling weak and dizzy quite a bit," Milo said.

In addition to the danger, Milo now believes that depriving players of water is self-defeating from a coaching standpoint.

"When you allow the kids to have water, it makes for a more efficient practice," he said. "They can perform for you. Otherwise they get weak and you won't get anything out of them. Having water available makes for a more efficient practice."

"Once in a while it gets blazing hot in August and the kids will really start perspiring," said Albany High football coach Bob Hoyle. "When that happens we make sure there are plenty of salt tablets and water on hand to prevent fatique and cramps. But generally the weather is cool around here. I've never had a kid get heatstroke."

Dr. James Wood, director of sports medicine at Ralph K. Davies Medical Center in San Francisco, also condemned the practice of depriving players of water in order to toughen them up.

"That macho mentality where an athlete doesn't get adequate water is stupid and dangerous," Wood said. "The kid who's tired, who's heat-reducing mechanisms are not up to snuff, and who's feeling weak and nauseous should be allowed to sit down in the shade and rest so that his body doesn't get overheated."

Wood likened heat stroke to a car that has overheated.

"When you're playing football or doing any other kind of physical work, the inside of your body is heating up," he said. "You're metabolic processes are increasing and you start sweating to cool your body down. If you work too hard and too long under the hot sun, your body becomes overloaded with stored heat that it can't dissipate. You stop sweating to conserve the remaining amount of water in your body."

Without the body's main defense against heat, Wood said the victim is "heading towards a coma."

"You've got a core temperature of 103 or 104 degrees and rising," Wood said. "The brain cells are in trouble."

Wood said that several steps must be taken fast to prevent death.

"Obviously, you've got a real crisis on your hands," he said. "You've got to get the person out of the sun and give him some water. You need to intraveneously feed them a salt solution similar to the fluid in the body. Bathing them in cold water or packing them in ice is also advisable."

Wood said, however, that the important thing is to prevent the athlete from reaching this dire condition to water and rest. He recommended that weight lifters be tored and that practice be in the evening rather than during really hot days. Heat must be avoided, Wood said, shows up to practice in tion.

The importance of camp in shape was also the two researchers Not surprisingly, they overweight or naturally player is most susceptible stroke.

Ticket sales, budgeted at 80 percent of capacity in John Hinkel Park amphitheater, is running close to expectations, with the current production of "All's Well that Ends Well" playing to near capacity houses.

In response to the financial crisis, the Festival's board of directors met in an emergency session Monday and agreed to an immediate major fundraising effort. They will be sending out an emergency appeal letter to their 3,000 regular subscribers, asking for contributions at the end of each performance, and seeking donations through print and electronic media announcements.

Board members are seeking individual contributions and funding from a number of sources. Operating expenses, in the meantime, have been cut to a bare minimum.

In a meeting of the Acting Company Tuesday, the Festival's non-Equity actors, actresses and production staff agreed to salary cuts.

If the Festival closes its doors, the Bay Area will lose one of its only three Equity companies.

The Festival is operating under a League of Resident Theaters Equity contract, employing six equity actors paid at the union's "D" scale, which is the last on the wage schedule. This, in addition to the large casts required for Shakespearean productions, makes it impossible for the Festival to exist off box office receipts alone, while maintaining reasonable ticket prices, Festival officials said.

The equity actors have agreed to loan the Festival a portion of their salaries. Under their union contract, they are not allowed to take salary cuts.

This year the Festival appointed its first executive producer, Peter Layton, director and founder of the Drama Studio, London.

During the press conference, Layton said that the Festival would also be able to make up the $50,000 shortfall by drawing capacity audiences the rest of the season.

The board also adopted a three-year plan, looking toward the establishment ultimately of a year-round operation rather than merely a summer season.

This is the Festival's ninth season. It has earned a reputation for mounting rarely performed plays as well as the more famous classics, and its productions have won many awards over the years.

"We must find a way to continue the season," said Bunnin. "The current production of 'All's Well' is delighting our audiences, and the upcoming production of 'The Winter's Tale,' which will be moved from Elizabethan times to the present, should prove an exceptional experience for theater-goers throughout the Bay Area. We are also negotiating with one of the most promising young Shakespearean actors in America for this winter's production of "Hamlet," which is to be directed by Richard "E.T." White, a prize-winning Bay Area director.

"I have faith," Bunnin said. "I've seen the way the public responded when the San Francisco Ballet was in financial distress. The public is our hope for survival, and I don't think that it will let the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival die."

Those wishing to contribute to the Festival in any way may write to Berkeley Shakespeare Festival, P.O. Box 969, Berkeley, 94701, or phone 548-[illegible]. Tax deductible contributions may be addressed to the attention of Zimmerman, administrator.

Patterson's chip: when smaller is even better

s have invented a

The thumbnail-sized

computer design.
This was the first time
any of us had ever ded a computer chip," rson said, "and in our said they were "follow-the trend without ask-themselves why.

Even though the manu-
turer gives you a com-
r with hundreds and dreds of commands," said, "people are only g a few of them" bee they can't remember
He thought we'd make many fewer keys and many fewer commands," he said. "We thought 'why not make those few very fast.' "

In most computers, the control section, or "brain" (which tells the rest of the system what to do), takes up about half the chip, but in Berkeley's new "reduced instruction set computer" (RISC) it uses only five percent.

Because less of the chip is given over to commands, Patterson said, "we still have this fantastic amount of hardware, but now we're using that hardware to make the commands go fast."

Another advantage of the new chip is that the number of transistors which must be specially designed for each new circuit is only a fraction of those in current microprocessor chips. As a result, the simpler systems will take only one to two years to develop, rather than the five years needed to produce today's computers.

This is especially important because with today's computers, manufacturers often spend $20 to $30 million creating a computer system, only to have it become obsolete in the five years it takes to get on the market.

In his personal life, Patterson appears to be as creative as he is professionally: he and his wife Linda, who live in Albany with their sons David, 13, and Michael, 11, were married at the age of 19.

"We were high school sweethearts," he said. "When my wife told a friend she'd been married 15 years, the woman said '-to the same person?' "

"I think we were very smart teenagers," he said. "When we got married everyone had dire predictions for the success of a teenage marriage. I have to give ourselves credit that at that age we knew the person we wanted to get married to for the rest of our lives.

"We knew we had met too soon, but we felt we had found the right person, and that was more important than timing."

Finally, he seemed to give up trying to explain his happiness. "I'm married to a great person," he said. "You'll have to ask Linda why it worked."

Patterson, who got into computer science mainly because a math class he planned to take in college was filled, earned his B.A. and a Ph.D. in computer science at UCLA.

He decided to stay on and earn his Ph.D., he said, because the job market was bad and student housing was good.

"We kind of stumbled into graduate school and it took me a long time to stumble out," he said.

After earning his doctorate, Patterson interviewed at colleges around the country and took a job at UC-Berkeley because the emphasis here was on teaching rather than research. He and his wife moved to Albany where she had grown up.

Patterson's said his success "hasn't affected my life too much."

"Thats what the goal is," he said. "I've certainly met people who've been lucky and something good has happened and that's changed them in ways that I'm sure that, before it happened, they wouldn't have liked.

"My wife's job is to make sure that doesn't happen."

"That's our deal," he said. "She's supposed to make sure I don't become a prima donna and I encourage her to go to school."

Linda Patterson attends the Academy of Art in San Francisco, where she is studying to become a graphic artist. Patterson said he and his wife had decided to "get our kids through the formative stages, and then she would go on and pursue the career she was interested in."

She designed the RISC symbol — a bulky '59 Cadillac with fins sitting beside a snappy new sports car — which reminds users that in the technological world, bigger is not always better.

Miniscule pictures of the sports car appear on each disk with the initials of each of the 41 students who worked on the chip.

Students took the computer design course, which was created by Patterson and Professor Carlo H. Sequin, over a four-quarter period. According to Patterson they were especially dedicated to the project.

"You find that in the computer field, people tend to work a lot," he said, "but this was exceptional."

Over two especially heavy 12-week periods, he said, students put in close to 10 hours a day, seven days a week, in addition to their other responsibilities.

"It became important in this design to look for burnout," he said, "and tell them to take some time off."

Patterson gave his award money to his wife and sons to spend on whatever they wanted. They'd earned it, he said, because they didn't begrudge the time he had to spend away from home.

"They let me spend the time it took to do a good job," he said.

Linda Patterson said her husband makes a point of maintaining a healthy balance between job and family.

"He realizes that family is more important than school," she said. "Saturday is family day, no matter what happens at the university."

The family spends the day together taking part in an activity chosen by one of them, within certain financial and mileage limits.

"Everybody has to give that time," she said. "That's the most important thing in all of our careers."

People in the computer field tend to get sucked into their work, she said, "and before you know it the kids are grown up and they're strangers. It's an occupational hazard.

"Fortunately we saw that in time."

Patterson said computers were now "making their biggest impact and affecting our society, like computer games, and the reason is the microchip."

"Computers that would have filled this room 30 years ago are now fitting on something the size of a thumbnail," he said.

To those who are intimidated by computers, Patterson says they're not difficult to understand. "If you understand the calculator," he said, "you've gone a long way toward understanding the computer."

Far from being superbrains, he said, computers can only take very simple commands.

"What leads people to believe they are intelligent," he said, "is that they will do what you tell them to — but very very fast.

"The computer is like some dumb fast brute. If you could give him a list of things to do and could make him do them fast and give a million options of things he could do — that would make him look a lot smarter than he was."

Tour to visit ranch and Indian village

KENSINGTON — The Kensington Community Council will sponsor a tour to Morgan Horse Ranch and Indian Village on Tuesday, Sept. 14.

The Point Reyes Morgan Horse Ranch is where this "true American" horse is bred and trained for service in state parks. Also planned is a tour of a replica of an Indian Miwok village where a Ranger will demonstrate the various tools and way of life of the coastal Indians.

Lunch is at the Olema Inn, followed by a visit to Larkspur Landing.

Cost including lunch is $21; send payment to KCC, c/o 26 Highgate Rd., Kensington, CA 94707 by Monday, Sept. 6.

Group set for parents

ALBANY — Family Services of Albany will be sponsoring a parent therapy group to begin on Monday, Sept. 13 from 12:30-2 p.m.

The fee per session will be $10 per individual; $15 per couple.

For further information please call Linnea Burnette or Jeff Levin at Family Services of Albany, 525-9110.

Birth made easier: new class is planned

A new class in childbirth training will begin on Saturday, Sept. 18 at Richmond Hospital.

The eight sessions will be held each Satruday morning from 9:30 until noon, and will end on Nov. 6.

The classes will be taught by Ann Sterling, the hospital's childbirth instructor. Students should be in their third trimester of pregnancy, and should be accompanied by the person planning to serve as coach at the time of birth.

The $30 per couple fee for the class covers all materials, and is refundable if delivery takes place at Richmond Hospital. Call Nora Stanton, R.N., for further information or to make a place reservation: 234-2525, Ext. 178.

Book sale set in E.C.

EL CERRITO — The Friends of the El Cerrito Library, a branch of the Contra Costa County Library, will hold their annual book sale on Saturday, Aug. 28, at the Open House Senior Center, 6500 Stockton Ave. (behind the library) from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Donated books and magazines will be sold to provide funds for services to the El Cerrito Library that the Contra Costa County Library budget cannot cover.

Proceeds from previous book sales have provided books for children, puppet plays for children, special equipment such as record racks and book bins, and an up-to-date Encyclopedia of Science and Technology.

Books for sale include both fiction and non-fiction, hard-cover and paperback.

Yin and yang

The ancient Chinese health building exercise of T'ai Chi has found many Western devotees, including this class at the Albany Senior Center. The class is taught by Judith Goldfarb (below), an accredited instructor of T'ai Chi Chih and T'ai Chi Chuan. Goldfarb's course, "The Literature and Art of T'ai Chi," includes 20 exercises and discussion of the principle of Yin and Yang. The gentle movements of T'ai Chi are considered useful in reducing nervous tension, controlling weight and blood pressure and creating a feeling of balance and serenity. A new class begins at the center on Sept. 8. For enrollment information call the instructor at 848-0965 or Vista College at 841-8431.

Parents take a look at private buses

By BARBARA ERICKSON

Disturbed because funds for "safety" busing were cut from this year's Richmond Unified schools budget, local parents are forming groups to investigate private contracts for transportation.

More than 150 parents attended a district-sponsored meeting Wednesday night in Helms Junior High on the loss of free transportation to elementary schools. School officials described the effects of the cut, and Patchett Bus Co. representatives outlined the cost of providing private rides for students this year.

The school board ended safety busing for about 1,200 students when it eliminated the program's $411,000 budget. A $5 million budget deficit forced the board to make a series of reductions in the tentative budget adopted June 23.

The loss of safety busing for dangerous intersections and long distances means the district will provide transportation only for special education and Career Development Center students.

Patchett representatives told parents it would cost $130 a day to operate a 66-passenger bus. If the bus were half full, it would cost families $3.94 per child. If it were full, it would cost $1.97, and if the bus were full and made two runs to two different schools each day, it would cost 98 cents.

Al Nicora, the district's transportation director, said some buses could make runs to two schools if they transported students to an elementary school at one time and to a secondary school, which opens later, at another time.

The parents of some Hercules and Pinole students who paid for busing last year said they were charged lower prices for the service. They questioned the cost quoted by Patchett, according to school officials. But Nicora said the low price was possible because the buses also made runs subsidized by the district and could operate at lower cost.

Last year the district provided free safety busing to the following schools: Bayview, Collins, El Sobrante, Ford, Grant, Kerry Hills, Lake, Murphy, Riverside, Sheldon, Tara Hills, Washington and Wilson.

Kindergarten students at Ellerhorst, Rancho, Seaview and Stewart also rode the buses.

Patchett suggested that parents interested in contracting for private services meet to form an association. Some groups met Wednesday night after the public discussion and arranged for further planning sessions.

Parents who want to investigate private busing contracts should call their children's schools for information.

Quilters to show slides

KENSINGTON — The August meeting of the East Bay Heritage Quilters' Association will be held on Monday, Aug. 30, at 7:30 p.m. at the First Unitarian Church, 1 Lawson Road, Kensington.

Guest speaker will be Katie Pasquini, who will discuss her development as a quilter and show slides of her work. Although she has been quilting for only five years, she has developed a distinctive style and has exhibited her quilts in one-woman shows in Eureka, Los Altos and Sacramento.

There is a nominal fee charged for this lecture: members $1, and nonmembers $3. For further information, please contact program chairperson Bernice Stone at 524-0117 or president Diane Hersh at 524-1695.

Art classes set in fall

The schedule for fall classes at the Richmond Art Center offers beginning, intermediate and advanced classes in ceramics, jewelry, lapidary, painting, drawing, sculpture, and textiles.

Children's afternoon classes in ceramics, puppetry, musical instrument making, painting and drawing, and felt and paper making will be offered, plus a Saturday film making class.

To receive a copy of the schedule, call the Art Center at 231-2163. Pre-registration is recommended. Classes will begin the week of Sept. 13.

Tuition starts at $40 for the ten week adult session. The Art Center is located at the Richmond Civic Center Plaza, 25th and Barrett Avenues.

Seniors set fall yard sale

Plans have been made by the advisory board of the Richmond Annex Senior Center to hold a yard sale and bazaar, at 5801 Huntington Ave. on Oct 2.

The sale, planned for 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., will feature needlepoint, paintings and crafts, all done by participants in the center's classes. Refreshments also may be purchased.

Brunch will be served by the volunteers of the Richmond Annex Senior Center every Sunday from 10-2. Donation, $1.50. For information, call 526-3553.

The center is open weekdays, 9-4.

Freeze day set at school

Easy Bay Educators for Social Responsibility will hold a disarmament education day on 'What to Tell the Children' Saturday, Sept. 25 from 1-5 p.m.

The seminar will be at the Peralta Year-Round School, 460 63rd St., Oakland.

Featured will be Patricia Ellsberg, and a panel of educators and students.

Films such as "The Last Epidemic," and mixed media presentations such as "Creating the Future: Peace Education and What Teachers Can Do," will be shown.

Panthers plan picnic

The Berkeley Gray Panthers will hold their annual picnic on Wednesday, Sept. 8, 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. in Live Oak Park. The picnic is open to the public of all ages.

Walk-a-thon set for women's rights

California N.O.W. will sponsor a 10-kilometer Walk-a-Thon and all-day First Annual Feminist Freedom Fair on Sept. 5 in Berkeley's Provo Park.

Targeting anti-E.R.A. legislators in local and state elections across the country is the goal of the "Kick 'Em Out" Walk for Women's Rights, which will raise money for California N.O.W.'s PAC (Political Action Committee).

The walk is part of a national campaign to mobilize resources so that the E.R.A. will be ratified rapidly the first time around.

Walkers participating in this event - the largest feminist fund-raiser in Bay Area history - will leave from and return to the First Annual Feminist Freedom Fair, an all-day celebration featuring kiddie rides, clowns, booths, entertainment and games.

For more information, call 387-2720.

Historical exhibit planned on old Chinese-American theaters

The Chinese Historical Society of America is preparing to exhibit a treasure trove of 300 newly discovered photographs of the productions and actors and actresses of the old Great China Cantonese Opera Theater in San Francisco's Chinatown of the 1920s and 1930s.

Research for the exhibition is uncovering the whole history of the Chinese American theater from 1852, when the first Cantonese Opera troupe arrived in the West at the height of the Gold Rush, until the present day. This will be the first major exhibition devoted to the main aspect of cultural life of the first, second and third generations of the Chinese American community.

The CHSA project staff is headed by Jack Chen of El Cerrito, author of "The Chinese of America," and Wylie Wong, a director of the Jehu-Wong art gallery in San Francisco.

The National Endowment for the Humanities, the San Francisco and Zellerbach Foundations are helping to fund the project. The Bank of America will present the interpretive exhibition in July, 1983 as part of its art program in the Concourse Gallery at its corporate world headquarters in San Francisco.

Since the photographs were found without a single caption on a trash dump in Chinatown, the project staff faces some difficult problems of identification. They would urgently like to hear from anyone who has material on America's Chinese theaters in San Francisco or elsewhere in the United States. Their address is 937 Liberty St., El Cerrito, 94530; 524-7287.

YMCA plans class for pregnant women

ALBANY — The Albany YMCA is offering an ongoing exercise program for mothers-to-be and new mothers, Mondays and Wednesdays, 7:30-8:30 p.m., starting Sept. 13.

The program is designed to strengthen muscles in preparation for childbirth and motherhood. Pregnancy-related problems will be discussed, and helpful exercises will be taught. Breathing techniques, relaxation and posture training are also included.

Also welcomed in the class are new mothers, since many of the exercises are very helpful for regaining their former posture and figure.

The YMCA instructor is certified and trained in prenatal and post-partum exercises. Cost is $10 per month for once a week, $20 per month for twice a week and $3 for drop-in fee. Child care will not be provided.

For more information, call the Albany YMCA at 525-1130.

Preschool has fall openings

ALBANY — The Albany Co-operative Preschool (850 Masonic Ave.) has openings this fall for children 2 years 9 mos. (toilet trained) to kindergarten age.

The school has added a pre-kindergarten afternoon session, to be directed by Jan Pearson.

In existence for 45 years, the school operates Monday - Friday, with a morning session from 9 a.m. to noon and the pre-kindergarten program from 1 to 4 p.m. Parents participate one day weekly during their child's session.

The tuition is $60 per month and school will start Sept. 13. Interested parents should contact Patricia McKay at 525-2147 for the pre-kindergarten program or Catherline Lutes at 549-0280 for the morning program.

Who will get a free lunch?

The Richmond Unified School District has adopted a policy for free and reduced price meals for children unable to pay the full price of meals served under the National School Lunch Program.

Local school officials have adopted the following family size and income criteria for determining eligibility:

For families of two members, weekly income up to $117 qualifies a child for a free meal; from $118 to $167, for a reduced price meal. For a family of three, the limits are $156, free; $221, reduced.

Application forms are being sent to all homes in a letter to parents. Each school and the office of the director of food services has a copy of the complete policy which may be reviewed by any interested party.

Co-ops hold flea markets

Bargain hunters will have their pick on Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 6 as three Co-op centers hold flea markets from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Shattuck Avenue Co-op (1550 Shattuck Ave., Berkeley), Telegraph Avenue Co-op (3000 Telegraph Ave., Berkeley) and the Geary Road Co-op (1510 Geary Rd., Walnut Creek) will be the sites for the flea markets.

There is no charge for admission and the public is invited.

Refund for elderly set

Alameda County residents 62 years of age or older, who are renters or homeowners and have a total household income of $12,000 or less annually may be eligible for a refund from the state franchise tax board.

The deadline for filing for this refund is Aug. 31.

If you would like to receive further information regarding this program or would like to know where to go for help in your community, please contact the Alameda County Area Agency on Aging at 874-7233.

Group set for parents

ALBANY — Family Services of Albany will be sponsoring a parent therapy group to begin on Monday, Sept. 13 from 12:30-2 p.m.

The fee per session will be $10 per individual; $15 per couple.

For further information please call Linnea Burnette or Jeff Levin at Family Services of Albany, 525-9110.

Open for business

Brenda McGonigle shows some of the merchandise at the area's newest Goodwill Store, which opened recently at 10400 San Pablo Ave., El Cerrito. The store is open Monday through Saturday, from 9:30 to 5:30, and Sundays from noon to 5 p.m. A truck for donations is parked at the Co-op in El Cerrito.

Local lab has a weevil that loves the waterhyacinth

ALBANY — A weevil that restricts its diet to waterhyacinth has been released in the backwaters of the "old river" near Tracy in a biological control effort that scientists hope in a couple of years may help control the pesky aquatic weed.

Waterhyacinth has been in the Delta area of California for years but recently has become a serious problem for marina operators, fishermen, waterskiers, and boatmen. The weed forms a thick mat on the surface of the water and in some extreme instances makes waterways impassable.

The effort near Tracy is the beginning of a cooperative project in California between federal and state agencies. Involved federally is the Army Corps of Engineers and USDA's Agricultural Research Service. State agencies cooperating are the State Department of Boating and Waterways and the California Department of Food and Agriculture.

Insects similar to the ones released near Tracy are being used in the southeastern United States and it is reported that they have reduced the growth of hyacinth there by about two-thirds in some areas. That project started in the early 70s.

Australia, whose climate and problems with the weed more nearly parallel California's, is also using weevils similar to those in the Tracy release. That program has been deemed a success in that in some areas an almost total collapse of the plant has been observed.

Lloyd A. Andres, ARS entomologist, Albany, who along with Lars. W.J. Anderson, ARS plant physiologist, Davis, released the weevils near Tracy, says that several other releases will be made in order to build up the number of insects to provide "seed" for distribution to other hyacinth problem areas in the Delta.

Meantime, chemical and mechanical meas[illegible] used to try to keep the weed from further in[illegible] California waters. Those sites where weevils [illegible] seeded will be set aside so that other control [illegible] not devastate the "nursery" areas.

The weevil, Neochetina bruci, is a native [illegible] waterhyacinth and, among other places, is from [illegible] America. Before importing them to the U[illegible] however, scientists at an ARS laboratory in [illegible] tested them against a wide range of crops [illegible] aquatic weeds and found that they were specific [illegible] hyacinth. The weevils can complete their life cy[illegible] waterhyacinth, Andres says.

Female weevils lay their eggs in the bo[illegible] fthe petiole where, when hatched, the larvae [illegible] and weaken the plant. When populations [illegible] enough, control is achieved.

"Biological control, as an alternative to [illegible] mechanical control, offers promising possibi[illegible] natural enemies are self-perpetuating once [illegible] tablished. Furthermore, it is less disruptive [illegible] strategy because it is more target specific [illegible] favorable cost-benefit ratio," Andres says.

The intiial release near Tracy was made [illegible] pupae and larvae. When the scientists return[illegible] after the release, adult weevils were seen to [illegible] the weeds. An additional release of adult weev[illegible] from Florida was made at that time.

Andres says that the weevils should comp[illegible] two life cycles in the "field" yet this season [illegible] is a slow process and any effect on the hya[illegible] not show for 2 to 3 years."

Entomologist Lloyd Andres is surrounded by waterhyacinth in the backwaters near [illegible]

Homes of the future may include office, too

By GEORGIA DULLEA
New York Times

PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y. — At first glance there is nothing about Luci and Frank Knight's cedar-shingled Colonial house at 4 Randy Road here to suggest that it is what the futurists call an electronic cottage. Look inside and you will find a roomful of razzle-dazzle office machines and a brave new baby named Lauren.

The 9-month-old Lauren is part of a technological and sociological experiment on the office of the future. Her parents, both full-time product-marketing managers at the New York Telephone Co., are dividing their workweek between a specially equipped home office in nearby Westchester County and their corporate office in midtown Manhattan.

"This way," Knight said, "we can both remain in our career assignments and still take care of Laurie."

"If we considered a baby sitter," Mrs. Knight went on, "but, with the commute, it would have meant leaving her from 12 to 14 hours. We didn't feel comfortable about that."

What feels comfortable is the current arrangement: One day Laurie waves goodbye to Daddy as he dashes for the train, briefcase in hand, and then she repairs to the office playpen to watch Mommy tap out sales plans on a computer terminal. The next day Mommy catches the train and Daddy stays home, where he may confer with co-workers over a speaker phone that fills the room with computerspeak. As a result the Knights were a bit worried that, instead of "da-da," Laurie's first word might be "da-ta."

Their boss, Barry Howard, the district staff manager, had other worries when the couple proposed the idea shortly after the baby was born. "The electronic cottage is something I talk about in computer-methodology classes," he acknowledged, "but I guess I needed to have it proven to me that it could really work."

Eight months into the experiment, officially known as the "business marketing work-at-home project," Howard sounded sold. Not only are the managers more productive, he said, but the office routine goes on as before: "For example, last week we had a district meeting. It was Luci's day in the office and Frank's day at home, so he attended the meeting using a teleconferencing facility. Everything was perfectly normal except for this gurgling sound in the background."

Laurie was gurgling a lot the other day after a business lunch of lamb stew, green beans and apple sauce. "Finito," her father announced, washing the small face, removing the bib and setting her down in the playpen. He then placed calls to a number of salespeople whose disembodied voices boomed from the speakerphone.

"The unit is fully loaded with extended forms and math attributes," Knight told a salesman as Laurie handed him a rubber turtle. The baby cooed and clapped her hands. Her father made a funny face and went on talking about math attributes.

Bay Area home costs: Slow rise

SAN FRANCISCO — The cost of a three-bedroom home in the San Francisco Bay Area rose 1.7 percent in the second quarter of 1982, and 3.5 percent since the same period of a year ago, according to a Bank of America survey.

The 3.5 percent annual rate of increase marks the lowest recorded rise in the Bay Area home since the bank began its study in July 1975. The next lowest annual increase was 5.7 percent, recorded this past April.

The figures for the survey are developed by the bank's Appraisal Department and based on interviews with subcontractors and material suppliers in Bay Area counties.

As of July 1, 1982, construction costs for a "standard quality, semi-custom" home stood at $69,810, excluding the cost of land and indirect expenses such as taxes, interest and property insurance. The corresponding figure on April 1, 1982 was $68,620.

Major components of the overall cost include; overhead and profit, 12.6 percent; rough and finish lumber, 7.7 percent; rough and finish carpentry, 10.7 percent; plumbing, 7.8 percent; stucco, 6.5 percent; and roofing, 5.1 percent.

Materials and labor accounted for 84.2 percent of total cost.

The house plan used in the study includes a main building with 1,570 square feet of living area, an attached two-car garage of 446 square feet, and patios, driveway and walks covering a total of 837 square feet. The house contains three bedrooms, 1¾ baths, living room, kitchen, family/dining room and laundry room.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

It was a team of four match back in 1967. Both South players played in four spades with a queen of hearts lead and duck in dummy. At table one, West continued with the jack of hearts. South took dummy's ace, ruffed a heart and led a diamond.

West took his ace and led the suit back. Now declarer played ace and a spade. West took his king and was caught in an end play. He gave it his best try by leading a club, but night had fallen.

Against Edgar and Norman, the other South would probably have found the same line of play, but he didn't get the chance. Norman overtook the queen of hearts with his king to lead back a club.

South won and led a diamond. Now Edgar came up with the killer. He played his queen, not his ace. Norman signaled with the 10 to show the nine.

South played dummy's ace of hearts, ruffed a heart and led a diamond. But Norman had his second entry, played another club and Edgar was sure of that big trick with his queen.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

If you want to see partnership defense look at this gem played by Edgar Kaplan and Norman Kay, who have been one of the best pairs in the world for 25 years.

Enchiladas have homemade crepes

Ready crust for chicken pie

Chicken takes on new loo

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Writer

Chicken every Sunday once meant the family sitting down to a roasted or stewed chicken replete with mashed potatoes, biscuits and gravy.

Chicken continues as a mainstay in menus, but now is served several times a week. It is still a less-expensive source of good protein and also a source of lower cholesterol. Most chicken dishes are easy to prepare, too.

However, chicken now appears at the table in many ethnic recipes, reflecting the widening interests of Americans in foods from all areas.

Especially popular are Mexican-style foods. Here is a chicken enchilada dish that features easy-to-make corn meal crepes or tortillas. It can be a party or family dish.

CHICKEN ENCHILADAS

Crepes:

1 cup milk
¾ cup enriched corn meal
½ cup all-purpose flour
2 eggs
¼ teaspoon salt

Filling and Topping:

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
One 10-¾ ounces can condensed chicken broth
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
1 tablespoon dried parsley flakes
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 teaspoons chili powder
2 cups chopped cooked chicken
One 16-ounce can refried beans
One 10-ounce can enchilada sauce

For crepes: In medium bowl, combine all ingredients, mixing until batter is fairly smooth. Let stand 10 minutes; stir. Heat 6 to 7-inch crepe pan or skillet over medium-high heat. Grease lightly. For each crepe, pour about 2 tablespoons batter into a hot, prepared pan. Immediately tilt pan to coat bottom evenly with thin layer of batter. Cook 45 seconds or until top looks dry. Turn; cook about 20 seconds. Stack crepes between sheets of wax paper. Makes 12 crepes.

For filling and topping: In medium saucepan, melt butter; blend in flour. Add chicken broth, onion, parsley, lemon juice and chili powder. Bring to a boil; cook 1 minute, stirring constantly, or until thickened. Add chicken and beans; mix well.

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Spoon about ⅓ cup chicken mixture across center of each crepe; roll up. Arrange filled crepes in ungreased 13-by-9-inch bak enchilada sauce over crepes; cover with fo 25 minutes or until heated through. Serve w and pepperoncinis or chili peppers. Garnish tomato, avocado or ripe olive slices, if de chen-tested recipe makes 12 enchiladas.
